GETTING READY TO CHOOSE THE NEXT PRESIDENT

Political Parties Beginning to Look Over Material for Campaign of 1916.

MANY HAVE SOUGHT HONOR

History Shows That Two Hundred and Eighty Names Have Appeared Before Conventions or in Electoral Returns, Among Them Those of Two Women.

Washington.-Who will be the next president of the United States? The political incubator is already being stocked with eggs for the 1916 hatching, but no soothsayer can tell just now what ones are fertile enough to produce even a candidacy.

During our hundred-and-forty-year career as a republic 27 Americans have held the exalted office which gave them more power than most kings have in modern times. Since the days of 1776 no less than 50 political parties have sought supremacy and have named candidates for the biggest job in the land.

Men now generally forgotten or unknown, but big in their day, had votes in the electoral colleges or in presidential nominating conventions as representatives of these parties. Their disappearance from public notice and memory is evidence of the fleeting nature of fame.

The following list of about 289 names of these who have been before conventions or in electoral returns includes those of two women. This tist is supposed to be complete. It is alphabetically arranged and gives the home state and party in most cases, of candidates and the year in which the name of each was considered. Asterisks indicate winners, Charles Francis, (Lib.-Rep.,

Dr. J. L. Shuler Will Commence the Remodeling of Park Sanitarium at Once.-Will Have Six Well Equiped Wards and be Up to Date.

One of Durant's greatest needs that of a modern hospital and santtarium, is to be supplied at once, and within three to four weeks will be ready to accommodate patients.

Dr. J. L. Shuler, owner of what is commonly called Shuler's Park, at the north end of Fifth Avenue, and the large ten-room house which has for six years been used as a residence, has already commenced the work of remodeling and moderni-ing the building, and as soon as the necessary supplies and equipment can be gotten on the ground, will equip six of the rooms as hospital wards, give her no exact information. She and throw it open for the use of all patients who care to take advantage of it, and for the use of local physiclass and surgeons. When Dr. Shuler was seen by a reporter this week he said that, while the sanitarium would be small, as compared with those in the larger cities, that all the modern conveniences and facilities for caring for all classes of patients would be provided.

The place will be in charge of trained and experienced attendants and will without question fill a long felt need locally.

For years patients from this county have flocked to the hospitals at Sherman, Paris and Dallas, and the larger portion of them for reason of they could be immediately cared for, have suffered unnecessary annoyances and added expenses.

IS ANGEL OF MERCY

Alfonso of Spain Busiest Monarch in Europe.

He Conducts Clearing House for Information About the "Missing" in the War-Every Inquiry Receives Attention.

Madrid.-King Alfonso of Spain is perhaps the busiest sovereign of Europe these days, although his country is not at war, nor likely to change its policy of neutrality as long as the war lasts. That strict and continued neutrality, without any political reasons why either side of the belligerents desires to have Spain change it, gives King Alfonso the privilege of appealing to any country at war for news of soldier husbands, brothers or sweethearts. He is doing so for all the women of Europe, receiving and replying to several hundred letters every day. They come from French countesses, English servant girls, from Austrians, Germans, Russians and Belgians. They are so numerous, numbering altogether about 50,000, that one whole floor in the royal palace in Madrid has been given up to a post office, where the king has installed aumerous secretaries familiar with the various languages and adept at reading every variation of handwriting.

It all started some months ago, when a young lady of France, acquinted with the king's gallant charactor, appealed to him to discover the whereabouts of her flance. She understood he had been made a prisoner of war, but her own government could had written to the German government, but as her communication had not passed through the proper channel it, of course, was never answered.

"Sire: A desolate lady asks your protection. Spain is the land of chivalry, and your majesty is the greatest Hidalgo of Castile, and I feel certain will hear me," she wrote to King Alfonso, relating the steps she had already taken without success to learn if her flance were still in the land of

The letter reached the eyes of the king. He was touched by its appeal and at once wrote to the Spanish Ambassador in Berlin to see what could be done. He was soon able to report the good news that the soldier in question was safely housed in a prison camp near Leipzig. The telegraph the lack of a sanitarium here where carried the happy tidings to the royal palace in Madrid, and from there to Paris.

The whole investigation had taken two weeks, and the grateful little Parisienne was so wild with joy that she told everybody. Dozens, then hundreds, of other desolate ladies fol-People down town hardly knew lowed her example, and their servants followed theirs; the story went

Not long ago the wife of an English private received a long communication from the king, written in reply to her as mighty little room for anyone with just as many indications on the royal palace as if he had been reply ing to a royal princess. His secretary

His majesty earnestly hopes that these inquiries may be the means of procuring satisfactory information for you."

In this case it was Ambassador Gerard who served as the first cavalier to the distressed English wife, passing the news on to the Spanish ambassador that the husband's health was excellent and that he was safely interned along with his comrades, not particularly enjoying "war bread," but hoping for better times.

The king has thoroughly organized this labor of mercy, and every letter received is immediately acknowledged.
